1971

When most of us were still using flash cards to learn the multiplication tables, and playing two-square during recess the rest of the world continued to plunge forward in the rat race. On the home front court-related situations took the lead in headlines across the nation.

On January 26, 1971 Charles Manson, age 36, and three of his followers were found guilty of first-degree murder. Although the trial took place in California the whole country observed proceedings daily through television, radio, and newspapers.

During this year the youth of our nation took a giant step towards adulthood when a Constitutional amendment lowered the legal voting age to 18 years old on March 10, 1971.

A court marshal jury of six officers on March 29 convicted Lieutenant William L. Calley Jr. of premeditated murder of 22 South Vietnamese at Mylai, March 16, 1968.

Amtrak started its great expanse of railroad systems that was to unite many areas on May 1, 1971.

An unsuspected riot broke out at Attica State Penitentiary in which 28 convicts were killed.

In 1971 Henry Winkler became very popular in the TV series "Happy Days." He played Arthur Fonzerelli or otherwise known as the "Fonz."

Tattoo parlors were created in many cities who sought this exotic fad. Many cities declared these businesses illegal but most continued to operate.

1972

We were, for the most part, still fifth graders when President Nixon made a big step in diplomacy when he made a trip to Peking, China, February 21, 1972. This was the first time they had made the U.S. welcome in their country.

While campaigning for a nomination from the democrat party as their candidate as president, George C. Wallace was shot May 15, 1972 by Arthur H. Bremer, 21 years of age.

It was at this time that five men were arrested for breaking into the Watergate hotel where the democratic party had its nominating headquarters. At first, no one thought much of this break in until the reasons for the break in were uncovered. This began the long saga of Nixon and the Watergate Affair.

During the 1972 Olympic Games at Munich, Germany in protest of prisoners being held, eight Arab guerillas invaded the Israeli Olympic Village and held hostages and made public demands. In the final count on September 5, 1972 two Israelis killed. Later five terrorists, nine hostages, and one policeman were killed.

On December 29, 1972 one of Americas most reknowed magazines "Life" issued its last copies and closed down their presses for this was their last run.

When Richard Nixon visited Peking, China many Americans took up the pastimes of ping-pong, yo-yo and Chinese food.

Karate and hang-gliding tempted many into these idealogical fads.

1973

What a great year 1973-74 was. There were so many things to remember: seventh grade orientation, the first day of school; when we forgot our combinations, lost our schedules, couldn't find our room before the bell, called teachers by the wrong name, and finally we still had to walk home after school. Oh, but there is even more than that, like the seventh grade picnic, getting used to gym two times a week for an hour, and last, but not least waiting in line for lunch for fifteen minutes when our lunch periods were only 32 minutes long. Seventh grade was so much fun!

The same year, January 27, 1973 an end came to the military drafting process, from here on out it was to be all volunteer.

By the mid 1970's mood rings were "in" with stones that changed color with the disposition of the bearer, and necklaces made of plastic tubing that glowed an unforgettable, gaudy neon in broad daylight.

One year later, in 1974, the streakers were to arrive. They blazed across the very same pages of national magazines and newspapers that carried the story of the Nixon impeachment inquiry. They streaked the Lyndon Johnson Library, making Lady Bird laugh and Walter Cronkite blush. They literally streaked everywhere.

Dance marathons, and marathons of every sort, were held across the country.

Boone tries for the rebound.

1974

In 1974 the Arab nations ended the oil embargo March 18. This put a so-called "end" to our energy crisis but the world conservationists still warn us to conserve.

Important Watergate hearings against Richard Milhouse Nixon began on May 9, 1974.

Nelson Rockefeller was nominated Vice President August 20.

Seven former whitehouse aides of President Nixon were indicted March 1, 1974 for taking part in the Watergate coverup.

The U.S. Supreme Court ruled that President Nixon must turn over tapes of conversations in the Whitehouse. This decision was made on July 24, the vote was 8-0 sought by Leon Jaworsky.

Mrs. Alberta King, 69, mother of slain civil rights leader, Martin Luther King, was shot and killed June 30 along with a church deacon. Marcus Chenault, 23, of Dayton, Ohio was convicted for this September 12.

On August 9, 1974 Richard M. Nixon's resignation as President of the United States shocked the world. Gerald Ford, then Vice President, became the 37th President of the United States of America.

President Ford gave Nixon an unconditional pardon September 8.

A conditional amnesty to Vietnam era draft evaders and deserters who would be willing to work up to two years in public service jobs was proposed by President Ford on September 16, 1974.

1975

The South Vietnamese government surrendered to the Communist Vietcong and North Vietnamese April 30, 1975 shortly after evacuation of American troops.

U.S. unemployment reached 9.2%, the highest point of the year.

Two assassination attempts against President Ford, by women in California, failed. Lynette Alice (Squeaky) Fromme, a Charles Manson follower, pointed a pistol at Ford September 5 in Sacramento, California, but a secret service agent grabbed the gun. Sara Jane Moore, a political activist, fired a revolver at the President September 22 in San Francisco, but a bystander, Oliver Sipple, deflected the gun.

F.B.I. agents captured Patricia Hearst, who was kidnapped February 4, 1974 in San Francisco, September 18, with others she was indicted for bank robbery.

This was the year that we seniors were in the eighth grade. Junior high dances were the thing when everyone went with friends, but boys stood on one side and girls stood on the other, each too chicken to ask the other to dance.

Everyone remembers watching the seniors dress up for 50's days during Homecoming. They came to school with their hair slicked back, dark glasses, and white t-shirts with rolled up sleeves.

It's a race for the tape.

One of our many boys in track races for the finish line.

1976

Tragedy struck Boone County in June of 1976. A tornado rampaged in a northward path through Jordan, a little town six miles east of Boone. Many in the Boone area felt the after effects of the tornado and some even viewed it. The impact was total destruction, with periods of rain to pelt the ravaged property. The town of Jordan was totally destroyed along with the grade school and the grain elevator.

It was an odd coincidence that the tornado struck on Sunday June 13. There was a series of small tornados that accompanied the main tornado. The southeastern skies become dark late in the afternoon and then changed to a gloomy green, the atmosphere became very calm and then the winds began. The tornado moved northward destroying many farms before making a ninety degree turn and heading for Gilbert.

It took quite awhile to recover and it was not uncommon to see farmers digging big trenches to bulldoze all their belongs that had been recked into to be burned.

Tourists toured the area to see where the houses had been and homes that had been knocked over or completely turned around. Cars and farm equipment had been turned into unrecognizable, twisted pieces of metal. The destruction was unbelievable. It made television, radio and the newspaper. It would be many months before the town of Jordon would be put back together again.

Fads continued through the seventies. In 1974 it was highlighted in the World Frisbee championships.

Piano wrecking, believe it or not, became a craze in 1974. The object was to see how fast it could be wrecked.

Locally all those who went to the fall play remember screaming as the bat plunged over the heads of the audience on a wire. Jon Grether made a superb Count Dracula that nibbled on ladies neck to leave his mark.

One year later, in 1974, the streakers were to arrive. They blazed across the very same pages of national magazines and newspapers that carried the story of the Nixon impeachment inquiry. They streaked the Lyndon Johnson Library, making Lady Bird laugh and Walter Cronkite blush. They literally streaked everywhere.

In 1975 remakes of "Young Frankenstein," and "King Kong" were box office hits.

On the Fourth of July our country celebrated its TWO HUNDREDTH BIRTHDAY! Banners were flown, T-shirts, buttons, flags, and of course firecrackers, and fireworks at the park touched off the long-awaited celebration.

Ron Watson was killed in a motorcycle-train collision on July 1, 1975--was member of class of 1976

1977

The Elvis Presley rise to stardom began back in the 1950's. He sang many songs that were to become fabulous hits that were still to be heard and sung twenty years later. A few of his songs were "Love Me Tender," "Hound Dog," etc. He became known as the King of rock and roll. On Tuesday, August 16, 1977 Elvis died. Many commemorative T-shirts, photographs, albumns, and glass decanters were sold in his memory.

In 1977 we had "Mary Hartman, Mary Hartman" as a soap opera spoof.

Pet rocks were being bought for everyone, on any occasion.

Earlier in the 1960's when it was called "sidewalk surfing" it took several lives. But skateboarding, being the "it," recaptured its popularity in the 70's.

Ironically, one of the few fads to become nationwide without the aid of mass communication media was the CB radio. Such phrases as "10-4 big big buddy," the "bear," and "10-100" became household terms that were to grab up the nation and begin the CB era of truckin'.

What a year 1978 was. Who could ever forget their junior year. We weren't the oldest yet but we were certainly high up in the school as far as prestige went, and yet we didn't have all the hustle-bustle of being seniors.

The year went pretty much as normal with occasional fire drills and tornado drills. The hot lunch program was still surviving even though criticisms were many and compliments were far in between.

Students took such classes as chemistry and Algebra II, physiology and Advanced Composition. It was a real challenge. Some were here before school and after school getting help, especially from Mr. Geiken in some subject foreign to most minds—called moles.

The junior class contributed much to the well being of the school—take for instance the 1978 Prom. The entire evening was put together by the junior class, the banquet was a success and anyone who remembers portions of Mr. Hora's will vow to this statement.

The Prom Decorations were exquisite with the "Wizard of Oz" being the central theme of which decorations were built. In the middle of the floor stood a tornado and the rest of the gymnasium was filled with wonderful paper flowers. From the dance the couples proceeded to the theatre where they viewed "Other Side of the Mountain Part II." At the Ki-Hi Kapper the kids were entertained by more music and filled with hamburgers, potato chips, pop and ice cream. This was the juniors final salute to the departing senior class. They were then to face the idea of being seniors themselves, and what a hectic year it would be indeed.

1979 . . . 1979 . . . 1979

Well folks, this was it, the year we waited and waited for; ever since we started kindergarten. The last year. Remember how it had been built up all through junior high, tenth grade, junior year? Then finally . . . we're seniors.

So many things happened throughout the year that it's hard to remember, but here goes nothing.

What was the name of that movie again that became a craze during the summer of 1978? Let's think, it had a lot of sho-bops, and "Summer Nights," and "Grease" seemed to be the word. This movie starred Olivia Newton John, and John Travolta. How many out there would admit to seeing this movie more than once, or buying the original sound track, or even going to your favorite disco to hear it?

When speaking of discos one has to mention the Picnic Disco. Many a Sunday night was filled with laughter, dancing and downright boogying at the disco. Remember that Sunday night was the night for minors to go because they didn't serve drinks on Sunday and since they raised the drinking age to 19 years old it didn't matter anyway.

Gary Gilmore, first execution in the United States in ten years. Death by firing squad.

Bert Lance, Director of the United States Office of Management and Budget, resigned. Massive personal overdraft and unusual loans while he was president of two banks.

Successful birth in England of first test tube baby.

Kunta Kinte and daughter Kizzy captured the imagination of America. Over 36 million families saw at least one episode of Roots.

Election of two popes within two months in Vatican City. Pope Paul VI died August 6. John Paul elected August 26, died in sleep September 28.

First non-Italian Pope since 1523.

Equal Rights Amendment extended 39 months to June 30, 1982.

Gambling defeated in Florida, New Jersey and Virginia.

Craig Howard 1978 All-State Baseball honorable mention.

Five Toreadors receive All-Conference honors. First All-Conference offensive team--Bill Killion, Mike Pritchard and Scott Myers. Second All-Conference defensive team--Randy Efkamp and Craig Howard.

Pritchard second in rushing.

Cindy Cook qualifies for State Cross-Country meet.

Toreadorette swimmers finish 7th in districts.

Scott Myers honorable mention in All-State football team.

Tim Harris goes to state, finishes 78th.

Clemons and Tripp to State meet.

The Unforgotten

I looked
Across the hall
And suddenly there was only you.
Didn't my friends notice
The look on my face?

We stared
At each other
As though we'd never get out fill.
But it was time for class.
And then time for lunch.

The times were few at first
But we contrived
To be near each other.
Our feelings were, I know.
So why didn't we ever talk?

Now you're gone
And my heart has turned to lead.
Gone
Are the happy dreams.
If only we had met.

His Loss

I remember
How a certain shadow
Was always there
She was a comforting assurance
That silently bore my soul, my problems
On her small shoulders
From afar.

I never talked to her
As a wind is ever present
And ever-eluding,
So was she
In her quiet, reserved way.
She lifted my spirit.
Without my being aware.
But she knew.

One day my strength disappeared
And my body shuddered.
Unconsciously I felt for her presence
And found emptiness.
My heart was cold
As I slipped into oblivion
But came back when I heard her voice for the last time as she died.
Who was she?
I do not know.

A Poem

The Unrequited

I loved you
 But you loved another.
 You lived
 To be near her
 While I died watching.

When she left you
 Who picked you back up?
 Who was waiting
 To be by your side
 And comfort you?

When she came back
 You stepped on my heart
 As you walked over to her.
 I cared for you
 Once.

Now I've found another
 Even though you started to care
 But then you noticed another
 And another.
 I never looked back.

Loneliness

It creeps up on us when no one's around,
When no one likes us or nothings going sound;
What we would give to hear a human voice,
But too many times we make the wrong choice.

When we think things are all just about right,
It finds us again and we end up in a fight;
We are prisoners once more for some unknown time,
When at last we escape to hear the bells chime.

Oh loneliness, oh loneliness how terrible you are,
How much better life could be, if you we could bar;
We would be happy, we would have friends,
But for now on you it all depends.

by Jon Sealine

Who will sing your song?

Love is a song. Many will attempt to present their versions of that song and you'll listen, playfully, until one special singer comes along, and suddenly, it's not a game anymore.
After him, no matter how many others sing to you, he'll be that one who haunts your memories. Then finally, you'll want no one but him to sing it to you.

I remember, I remember,
 My childhood days so free,
 When all my problems could be solved
 By my best friend and me.
 I remember, I remember,
 The years of summer camp,
 And how I loved those canvas tents
 That were so dark and cramped.
 I remember, I remember,
 So many happy things
 That, as I write, come rushing back
 Like moths on silver wings.

A Boone track girl clears the high jump bar.

Junior high shows an excellent mixture, even some like Amy Hughes who also runs on the junior varsity squad.

As I sat gazing out the glazed pane
during a gentle night-fallen rain
I pondered the scintillating splendor
laid before my drained
and weary brain.
And in its drizzling
rivulets
reflecting artificial light
I sensed a soundless running universe
flickering lonely in the night.
Countless billions,
trillions, distant stars
each a kingdom in its right shyly shimmering on my window pane sending messages in
the night.
They told of endless
everchanging space untraversed
until a searching traveler its vastness, dares to face.
How could such a simple thing
express itself
with such silent eloquence?

We expect great things from them someday.

The 7th graders show enthusiasm for their first intra-squad game.

At the bottom again. . . do you remember what it's like to be a 7th grader? They do. . .

(This is a compilation of 7th grade writing on "What it's like to be a 7th grader." All errors have been left as they were on their papers.)

Being a seventh grade student is like being in kindergarden, you have to watch out for everyone else because they are all bigger than you. You also have to watch where you are going because the halls are so crowded. Another thing about them and the rooms is the color. I think the color shouldn't be green but a more bluish one insted.

I think we need a new school, I don't think anyone likes to go to school her either. In the cafeteria you have to wait in a huge line and the food is horrible.

It's exciting too because I get to go out for sports and play an instrument in the band.

I like it because of that and you get to change every hour and not stay cramped up in one room.

My first day I had alot of fun. Luckily I didn't miss any classes.

The first day is scary. I have to move very fast so has not to be late for class.

Any day everybody shoves people around into people, or pushes them down the halls or they would tell you to move faster or out of the way.

It is embarrassing, too, like when I am going to get a book or something and when I am walking down the halls and I drop the "pass paddle" while everyone else is in class.

It is very exhausting walking up and down the torrid halls and in your classrooms, the halls are undersized so are the classrooms this makes it very crowded.

You would think that it is better. The school is always organized.

It's also very weird going around to other rooms.

My favorite part is getting to meet new kids & there are so many to choose your friends from.

I also feel more individual because I don't have the same person in every class and very tiring running from room to room.

I was kind fearful of going to my classes because everything is so different from Grade School.

I also hate trying to get into my locker and when I do have to reach clear up to the top one when the kid who has the bottom locker is taller than me. And I love to swim in gym.

It is boring in study hall for a half an hour with nothing to do, and the sounds are different from the sounds I heard at Page. Here I hear sounds like cars and mopeds.

There's big and little kids, around everywhere. It's a lot different than last year in grade school. We have to remember two locker combinations. Teachers' names, the room numbers, and where to go.

When the bell rang for first hour, I was scared to death.

I like the sports because there is more of a variety.

Being a seventh grader is like a new house. And the lunch is better because we got different choices.

I feel excited about being a 7th grader because I get more rights. I also feel important because I made it to the 7th grade.

My first class I was nervous as Leon Spinks was when he got in the ring with Mahammed Ali, because I walked in late after the bell rang. And the halls, the halls were as crowded as New York's City's sidewalk, people shoulder to shoulder and arm to arm. All the older kids are really friendly like telling you where your class is if your lost.

And time seems to go faster in seventh grade.

When I walked in it was very noisy, like on Christmas when my relatives are all there.

I like Seventh grade because it is a new experience.

Some classes are challenging because I get so much work sometimes and it seems like a challenge to get it all done.

It was alittle hard but now it is okay.

Jr. High is funner than elementary. It is fun moving from class to class.

During the first day school it was a mass of confusion. I like Study Hall because it gives me a chance to catch up on my work and read.

Being a 7th grader is like being stuck under concrete after an earthquake. At first all the work seems to pile up on top of me and pretty soon I dig my way out. Some other problems that relate to an earthquake are the crowded halls and small doorway.

You get to see so many rooms. I felt small the first day as small as an ant.

It was like being in a hive with hundreds of busy bees. Locker doors slamming and a low roar of voices added to the terrifying experence. I felt like a chipmunk surrounded by tigers. In conclusion I would like to add that I am alive and well after surviving the first day at Boone Jr. High.

As a seventh grader it is sort of scary for me on the first day because I had to face all those new teachers and other kids that sometimes pick on me. It makes me feel like Cheryle Ladd trying out for her first part in "Charlie's Angels."

I was also very leary and nervous of comming the first day. I found I liked the counsilers and was having fun. I like this schools cafeteria lunches alot better.

The older kids sometimes give you the wrong room.

I was nervous and jumpy. It is not easy being a seventh grader. The first day of school I felt scared and silly. It was crowded and the sounds were awful.

The first day of school was a bummer. Trying to get through the halls I almost got trompled. I couldn't get to where I wanted to go. When I went up to third floor there was a steady stream of 10th, 11th, and 12th graders going to lunch, and I couldn't get to my class. I came down from lunch and got to my locker but couldn't get it open. I had to ask a teacher to help me. I was pretty embarrassed when he opened it very quickly. Then finally the last bell rang and school was over for the day. But after all that, school wasn't so bad.

I seem to be running into everybody I also imagined people would go as fast as they could to the next room. They go as fast as a herd of turtles through a sea of peanutbutter. i thought we could sit where we wanted to. Assigned seats jumped out at me like a jack rabbit in a hidden hole.

I was scared and I filled sick to my stummy after a will I felt better after a well.

The lunches are different because they are so cold and the lunches here are so warm, but it doesn't mean I like them there just warmer.

I was not looking forward to school but I had to go! I was pretty sensitive about the way I looked. It was like a subway station.

On your way to school that morning, you were probably very excited about coming to the High School. Then, when you saw all the students and the size of the building, you probably got nervous and you wonder: "What am I doing here?" So, you go to your locker and put in something and get ready to go to your first class when you hear over the speakers: "ALL students should be in their 'Homeroom' . . ." So finally you get there just in time to hear the announcements. Soon the speakers say: "Proceed to your next class." When changing classes, you're wondering how ANYBODY can get to class on time. Next thing you know, you're asking yourself: "What floor am I on now? Where am I to go now?" . . . And when you got to the wrong class for the 3rd time, you start feeling pretty embarrassed. But, now you're not too worried about what happened "The 1st Day In 7th Grade."

I wasn't nervous and thought of it as a time when I would be able to expand my skills, and have the opportunity to try new things.

Seventh grade is like being a clown. It's like being a clown because is fun.

Being a seventh-grader is diving off a diving board and not knowing how to swim.

Being nervous on the first day of high school is like dropping a glass vase.

In a few of my high school classes I sometimes sat in the wrong seat. I keep forgetting which seat to sit at.

I had a least five new friends, and that made me very glad I came hear this year.

Being a seventh grader sometimes makes me feel like a prisoner. You can't go to the bathroom in Study Hall unless you are about ready to have an accident. When you walk through the halls you get pushed and shoved and stabbed in the back with pencils so ofter that I almost feel like I'm walking the plank.

The songs are choreographed by their director, Steve Carstenson.

I was scared that my teachers wouldn't be nice but they all were.

Sometimes it's interesting listening to what the teachers have to say, and sometimes it's boring listening to what they have to say.

It is more fun when we have more than one teacher so if I have a mean teacher I only have to have him for an hour.

It's like I were from another planet and no one else speaks my language.

The day seems to go faster too. I guess it's because I'm up & moving around more.

I was so excited I couldn't even eat my breakfast.

The first day I was so scared because the school looked as big as a battleship, but now I know my way around.

But in chorus I was mad because I got changed from soprano to alto.

Being a seventh grader takes a lot of patience.

I think this is really going to be a fun and exciting year.
