things to ponder...

Brad Strable's first kiss was Kelli Weakland.
Jonna Moore would like to work in a department store as a buyer.
Sara Harringa was caught by guys while she was undressing in the dressing during a junior high play.
Alisa Santage passed out during her Confirmation service.
Chuong Tran wants to be rich and married by the time he reaches his 10 year reunion.
Sienna Burke will not miss the immature underclassmen.
Nikki Drake had a junior high crush on Nathan Hilton.
Toby Smith had a junior high crush on Julie Peterson.
Jill Gorshe claims her worst trait is her procrastination.
Kari Vickers ran into a fence in the Ledges while she was on a date.
Sarah Williams hopes to be a CPA when she finishes school.
Ryan Caskey hates it when teachers tell him to take his hat off in the hallways.
Nic Marquardt was in a car accident with Ramona Jacobson.
Shay Conyers worked as a housekeeper at the Super 8.
Brian Cupp got locked in the closet with Mrs. Lange in sixth grade.
Patience Edberg will not miss the fights and rumors at BHS.
Jason McCaslin was on the undefeated Taboo team in advanced speech.

• Senior Ramona Jacobson receives a hug after graduation. The weather was a cold 38 degrees and rainy on the day of graduation.

just asking...

Words can hurt...

Rumors intentionally or unintentionally destroyed reputations and hurt feelings. "I think people ought to keep things to themselves and not tell everyone lies," senior, Therese Scoles said.

Told out of spite or just to get back at someone, rumors were offensive. The rumors ranged from girls who were supposedly pregnant to some people who were just given "nicknames" because of something they might have done.

"I think the way rumors "fly" in this school is terrible. My advice is ignore it and don't contribute to it," senior, Katie Niemants said.

Just walking down hallways became a nightmare for the victims of gossip. "It's complete paranoia and total idiocy," junior, Jeff Droste said.

It had to be pretty tough for the powerless people to not know who was friend and who was foe. The no weapons policy could not apply to backstabbing and shoving "knives" into backs and twisting every chance they had.

The rumors and gossip didn't seem to improve with aging. "Gossip hasn't gotten any better because in this town even adults contribute to it. Kids just learn from their parents," junior Andrea Platter said.

In reality, most students were pretty level headed and knew when to draw the line. They had a good idea as to when to let something go without even blinking an eye.

just asking...

Good or bad luck

"When I was in tenth grade the guys on my hockey team told me that shaving my head would make me play better. I'm not sure it was worth all the jokes it created," junior Eric Bailey said.

Lucky charms and good luck rituals have been around since the beginning of time. Whatever the reason, superstitions were as big as the event. Whether it was one of the original superstitions everyone heard about (sports charms, school things), or an off the-wall-weirdo superstition, everyone had something to help or blame.

"Before every kickoff in football, I shake out each leg, tap both my knees with my hands, and then touch my hands to my head to clear my thoughts. It must bring me luck because most of the time I get the tackle," senior Rocky Anderson said.

Not all sport superstitions were that complicated. For example, Graig Taylor wore the same underwear for each basketball game. Most of these superstitions came after success.

"Every time I win a wrestling match I make sure not to step on the outline when I walk off the mat. It gives me confidence for my next match," senior David Doran said.

Since high school and sports go hand in hand, it was only fair that students made up their own superstitions around school.

Bathroom stalls were not often thought of as superstitious, but even they couldn't escape luck's grasp.

"I've used the same stall all four years I've been here. If I used a different one I might get sucked down the hole," senior Ryan Jones said.

Sitting in the same seats everyday even when there wasn't a seating chart brought good luck to Nic Fontanini. Away from school and sports, all sorts of other interesting superstitions were practiced.

"On New Years Eve my mom makes my family eat beans. She says that every bean equals one dollar of what you will make that year," freshman Cindy Grunstad said.

The fact of the matter was that superstitions were everywhere. They brought comfort and "luck" to an otherwise ruthless world.

• NOOOO...that's not a cigarette that senior Brad Strable has in his mouth. Brad used suckers to keep him calm during different testing times.

• PLAYING OUR SONG and adding spirit, the pep band seems to bring luck at the home games. The fans in the stands had favorite songs for the band to play at different events.
