JUST NOT ENOUGH TIME

Picture this: Rushing to your car with a bag full of books after a long and exhausting practice, then going to work for 2 or 3 hours. After that, you then have an average of 1 to 2 hours of homework. This little routine might not sound too bad, but try it for 5 days a week, all year long.

Students who were involved in activities did this everyday. With this daily procedure, they were too busy to do anything relaxing. Watching movies, listening to music, reading a book or talking on the phone were all out of the question.

On the other hand, students who worked those kind of hours also missed out on school activities. Where else could anyone get into a sporting event, musical performance, play or dance by just using a school I.D.? NO WHERE!

Missing school events meant missing out on school memories. Graduates didn't remember how hard Mr. Geiken's chemistry test was. Memories were part of school life.

"I work a lot because I like making money so I can buy whatever I want. But a lot of times I had to work when there was a football or basketball game," senior Brian Cupp said.

Like most situations, there were two sides to every story. There were positive consequences of being busy all the time. It helped to build responsibility. It taught the student how to use what little time they had wisely. It also taught them how to manage and prepare for the future.

"It makes me upset when students have to have a job during school years. They sometimes don't have the time for homework and they miss out on school activities," math teacher, Mr. Jeff Wells said.

by Dylan Wirth

IF YOU COULD TAKE A CLASS OVER...WHAT WOULD IT BE?

"POTTERY...because it lets me do whatever I want."

-DENIE ANDERSON, 11

"LIFE PREP...Mrs. Grotewold was great!"

-LINDSAY SAUNDERS, 9

"SPEECH...It was easy and fun."

-SARAH ALDRICH, 10

"WORLD HISTORY...because Mr. Achenbach makes the class fun."

-JOEL HITSMAN, 9

"SCIENCE...so I would know what I am doing."

-TIM McGLYNN, 9

"ENGLISH...because I need to try harder."

TAMMY EARLL (11) almost bit her tongue off and needed stitches.

GETTING FRIENDLY WITH THE LOCAL POLICE, senior Nic McIntyre carries on a conversation with someone he's gotten to know quite well. Students found they were not as pressured by police officers this year compared to other years.

STUDENTS IDENTIFIED BY CRAZY ACTIVITIES

SOMETIMES STANDING ON HER HEAD gives junior Kristin Stoner ideas of how to entertain herself at the end of the school year. Once spring finally "sprung", students found it easy to get rid of extra energy.

STOCKINGS HANGING ON LOCKERS was an unusual sight, however these junior girls let their Christmas spirit show among friends. Celebrating were Amanda Potts, Cindy Grundstad, Jill Meyers. Row 2: Erika Cramer, Wynn Severs, Holly Hurst, Brenda Brockman, Tiffany Grider.

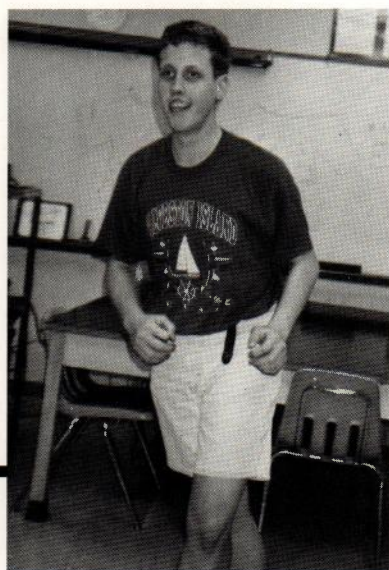

DISECTING clams, sophomores Lori Amendola and Mike McMahon really get into the lab assignment. Throughout the semester, students dissected several different species.

COLOPHON

The 1995-96 Scroll was published with the assistance of Jostens Printing and Publishing Company in Visalia, California. The 72 member staff produced the 83rd volume. The book contained 224 pages plus a 24 page "World Beat" supplement. Pages were printed on 80 lb. enamel stock paper.

The cover was designed as a four-color litho coat matte over grain.

Palatino, Helvetica, Kuensler Script and Myriad Tilt were the main fonts throughout the book. Pagemaker 5.0 was used to design layouts on four Power Macintosh 6100/60 AV computers and a LaserWriter Pro printer. Other graphic programs were Typestyler, Aldus Freehand, and Adobe Illustrator.

The book sold for $28.00.

RYAN JONES AND JEREMY McNACE

• Classes provide excitement and experimentation for sophomore Monica Graham as she starts to dissect her clam. Many of the hands-on labs helped the students understand the theory much better than reading about it in the book.

• Getting involved in the tragedy of Romeo and Juliet, freshmen Tyler Smith, Josh Hanson and Chris Murphy get into the act by reading in from of the class. The English teachers provided togas to add to the atmosphere whenever classes studied Shakespeare.

• Friends dance with each other, often forgetting about dates, at the Prom. The local group, TMP palyed for the first dance.

• Sharing last minute memories, seniors Tim Flemmer, Derek Gorshe and Shawn Brogden get together after the Class Day ceremonies. Saying goodbyes was emotional for seniors as well as underclass friends.

ALWAYS CARRY YOUR I.D.

"You will always be an Iowa child...no matter where you live."

-MRS. KAREN HESSER,
Commencement Address

Senior Matt Jones enjoys one last taco with friends.

The tapestry of life is not yet woven, and with that change will come new identities.

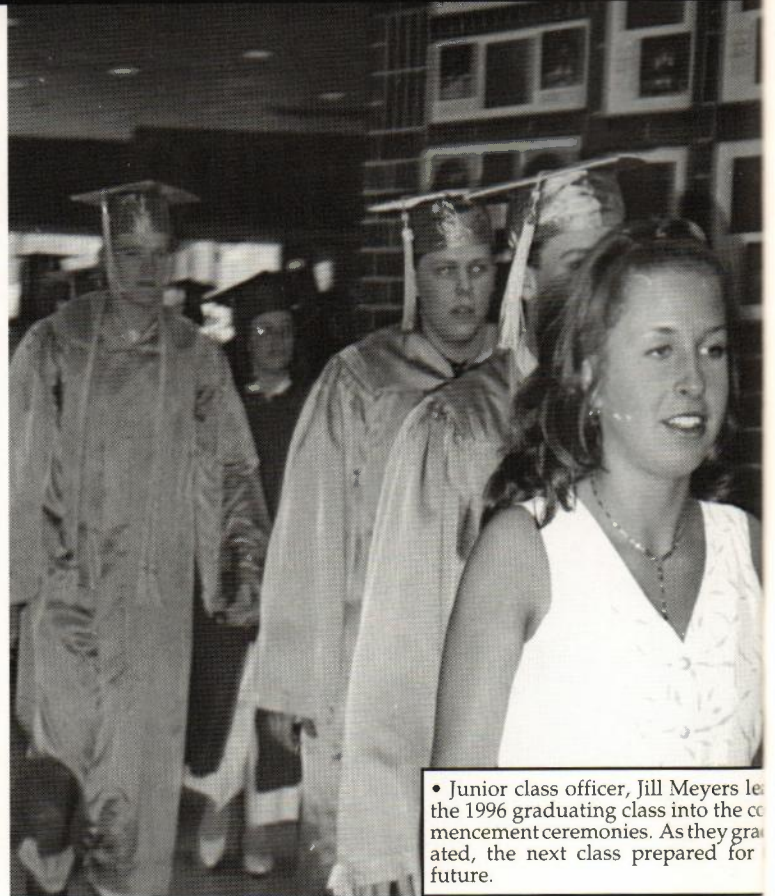

We were facing the truth...the truth that the school year was finally over. Maybe just another year for some and maybe a lifestyle for others.

The rumors came and went, as well as the prom date, the big game, and the semester test. Everyone contributed to the success, both individually and as a group. Whatever the situation, we identified ourselves as winners.

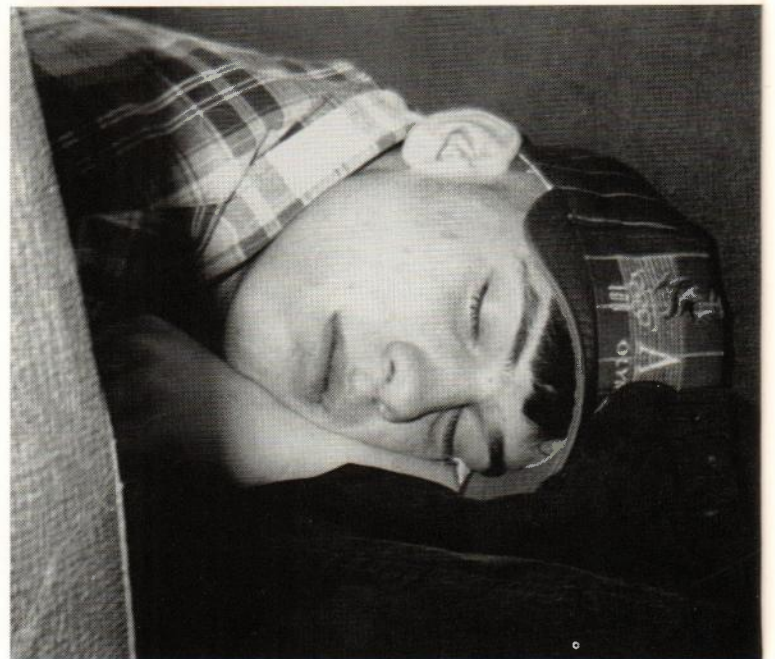

Dreams and secrets were finally revealed after an incredible amount of hard work and dedication. We did well for our school and for ourselves.

As the school year ended, the door opened to the world so we could express our individuality. We learned to have our own personality...to be true to ourselves...and to always carry our identification for those around us to notice.

• Not aware he has been caught, sophomore B. J. Stecker dreams of good times.

• Junior class officer, Jill Meyers leads the 1996 graduating class into the commencement ceremonies. As they graduated, the next class prepared for future.
