•WATCHING for the puck, Lindsay Pecenka ('01) and Katelyn Novacek ('01) get ready to score. P.E. students always enjoyed fast pace games.

Taking a date to the show didn't always mean just seeing a movie. It also meant spending money on snacks for watching the show.

"We like to go to the show, but can't really believe how much a bucket of popcorn is. Usually we try to eat something before we get into the theater so we aren't tempted at the concession counter," senior Paul Reese said.

The new theaters in Ames appeared to have a new appeal to the patrons. The movies changed more quickly and even if one stayed for awhile, there were enough to make a new selection the next weekend.

"I hate to try to pick out a show. Usually what I like, the people (person) I go with doesn't like. Seems we ne ver get everything together at the same time," junior Mike Etringer said.

Even though the movies seemed like an easy way to be entertained, many students preferred to stay at home and rent their own.

"We can make our own popcorn and it's cheaper," junior Tyler Boyd said.

Now that I have a job, I find it a lot harder to get up in the morning.

There are just some days that I punch the alarm snooze 6 or 7 times before I can even crawl out of bed.

I think having the job is good but I miss out on some of the fun that my friends are having when I am at work.

I also let my homework slip which doesn't help my grades any. I have made it a goal not to let my work take over my life but school doesn't seem so important at 7:30 in the morning.

Making CHOICES

Everyone had good intentions when starting new classes. However, after sitting in a class, some felt the need to drop the class. That was when the trouble started.

It wasn't the fact that that teacher wouldn't let you drop. The problem was actually getting in to see a counselor so you could change to a different class.

"I tried to get into the counselor for an entire day. They told me that I couldn't come in during my regular classes and every other time I walked by, they were busy" sophomore Amanda Condon said.

The counselor's office tried to work with the students as well as possible. The policy stated that after 30 days, no schedule changes would take place. This forced students to make choices and then stand by them.

"We try to help students be successful. If they start a class well into the quarter, they have missed a lot of information," counselor Mark Hanna said. •by Heather Newbrough

Learning to tackle the adjustments needed for a second year in high school caused stress for some individuals.

"I tried to get involved in activities more during the year. Last year I didn't really feel that we were invited to become involved because we were too young," sophomore Julie Todd said.

New responsibilities came with the new classes offered to sophomores. Even though students could take courses anytime they wanted, there still seemed to be an unspoken schedule that was followed.

"I really wanted to be on the yearbook staff so I just signed up for it for my sophomore year. I think more people should take it when they are sophomores so they can become a leader the next year," junior Jena Kelley said.

It seemed like just yesterday." Most have heard and even said this line many times in a lifetime. Some things that happened in life were like photographs that will never be erased from the viewers' minds. The great things, and even the bad were constant reminders of what life really was.

"When I was in the second grade at Lowell, I spilled my food all over me. I was embarrassed so I faked getting sick and I got in trouble," junior Eric Lindgren said.

Seniors were quick to remember the times they walked into the high school for the first time. For freshmen, it might have seemed like

NEW ADVENTURES

Lessons to be learned

Anyone who survived a couple of years in high school knew that the ninth grade year required much adjustment with few rewards.

The closed lunch hour often caused stress for the freshmen. Since many had friends who were upper classmen, it became tempting to sneak out during lunch.

"I wanted to go with my friends to McDonalds one day so I just left. It took two days to get caught, but I had to serve detention because of it," freshman Travis Crooks said.

The first chances to take part in open campus freedom came during the semester test days. All high school students were released from school during free class periods.

"I loved being able to leave the building during the day. I just hope that this won't be taken away from us next year," freshman Adam Russell said.

Even though class officers didn't get involved in decision making, they did get the chance to express their opinions and stand up for their class whenever the administration set up advisory boards.

"I ran for the office of President because I wanted to get a chance to help my classmates."

It seems really strange to have three teachers retiring this year. It doesn't seem like they should be old enough to be retiring....but then maybe we don't seem old enough to be graduating.

The memories in Mr. Nutt's classroom are crazy. He had that low-keyed voice that just about drove you nuts, but then he would say something really interesting and it would wake us up! What a guy! We will miss him!
